

Template resolutions authorising issue of shares by unanimous shareholder approval

User notes

There are two ways to authorise the issue of shares:

- ▲ by a resolution (and certificate) of directors
- ▲ by the agreement of all entitled persons (essentially all shareholders).

If the company can easily obtain the agreement of all of its shareholders to the issue of shares, we recommend using that method. This is because:

- ▲ it avoids public disclosure of the terms of issue. Under the directors' resolution procedure each director who resolves to issue the shares must also sign a certificate describing the consideration (i.e. price per share) and terms of issue of the shares. This certificate needs to be filed at the Companies Office, and therefore becomes a public document
- ▲ there is no need to obtain a separate waiver from shareholders of any applicable pre-emptive rights (see below).

This resolution assumes that the share issue will be approved by a unanimous resolution of the shareholders (i.e. all entitled persons) of the company. If the share issue is not being approved by unanimous resolution of shareholders, use the template directors' resolutions to approve share issues under the fund raising section of the templates page of our website.

Check whether your constitution dis-applies the pre-emptive rights set out in section 45 of the Companies Act 1993. Under the Companies Act 1993, unless stated otherwise in a company's constitution, existing shareholders in the company have pre-emptive rights that mean any new shares in the company must be offered to those shareholders before they can be issued to third parties. If existing shareholders do have pre-emptive rights, these rights will need to be waived by those shareholders before any new shares can be issued. If the share issue is to be approved by agreement of all shareholders as set out in this template document, no separate waiver of pre-emptive rights will be required.

Under New Zealand securities legislation, a company may not issue (or offer to issue) shares, options or other securities without providing detailed disclosure information to the new shareholders unless the company is satisfied that an exception to the information disclosure requirements of the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 applies in relation to that offer or issue.

Please see our NZ securities law – tech company capital raising guide (under the capital raising section of the guides page of our website) for an explanation of the relevant exclusions. A company must ensure that an exclusion applies before it offers to issue, or issues, shares.

Under section 117 of the Companies Act 1993, the issue of new shares that rank equal, or in priority, to existing shares requires approval by a special resolution of shareholders (i.e. a 75% majority), unless the constitution of the company expressly provides otherwise. The constitution should be checked for such a provision and, if one is not provided or if the company does not have a constitution, the company must obtain the approval of shareholders holding at least 75% of the voting rights before any shares can be issued. If the company has issued more than one class of shares (e.g. ordinary and preference shares), separate special resolutions of each group of shareholders who will be affected by the share issue will be required. The Kindrik Partners template constitution (see the governance section of the templates page of our website) provides that this section 117 approval is not required.

This template document includes a resolution of directors issuing the shares. This is necessary to deal with the mechanics of the share issue, for example authorising the execution of the subscription agreement (if any) or the terms of issue of the shares. The directors' resolution assumes that directors will vote by signing the written resolution, rather than in person at a board meeting. As such, it must be signed by all directors of the company.

The company must notify the Registrar of Companies of the share issue within 10 working days after the shares are issued. This can be done online via the Companies Office website.

The use of [square brackets] around black text means that:

- ▲ the requested details need to be inserted

- ▲ there are different options for you to consider within a clause
- ▲ the whole clause is optional and you need to consider whether to include it, based on the company's circumstances and the user notes.

Before finalising your document, check for all square brackets to ensure you have considered the relevant option and ensure that all square brackets have been deleted.

If you delete any clauses or schedules, remember to cross reference check the document.
